
Message from the Director

Welcome to WAVES number 6. In line with previous editions this issue presents some of the finest results obtained by our research groups during the last year.

WAVES is experiencing a steady growth in readership not only from our national scientific and technical community but also from international institutions from which we have received requests for delivery of forthcoming issues. Furthermore, citations to WAVES papers in international journals and conferences are starting to grow as well.

I believe that the main reasons for this success lie in the careful selection of papers and, especially, in the dedicated and priceless work of our reviewers to whom, in these lines, I want to pay tribute and recognition. I want to thank as well our contributors for making the effort of communicating their results in such an engaging and accessible way.

Enjoy!
